

Building with God

Jesus loves to speak in parables. He uses intriguing images for his audience and draws his examples from the daily life of those who surround him. Thus the Gospels are full of references to agricultural life. He also uses another area: construction. Without a doubt he is marked by the importance of the Temple, built to worship God and to be, by its beauty, a witness of the greatness and splendor of the one who dwells there.

We build for and with God. In fact the entire Bible teaches us that we cannot build in a haphazard fashion and we must never build without God, for the project would be destined to fail. The story of the Tower of Babel is the strongest example of this.

In order to build, it is necessary to know the goal we want to attain...and give ourselves the means to do so. This is true for a building but as well for projects which are not material. Thus it is particularly important to turn to God for help.

Therefore, our spiritual life is built with patience little by little. It is necessary to learn to have a solid foundation. Regular reading of the Word of God allows us to build on solid rock. A prayer life adds an openness of the heart which permits God to dwell there.

This is also the case for our Rosary Team. Peacefully, it is built around a seed of fervent believers who faithfully follow the fundamentals of the Movement both naturally and supernaturally. God comes to dwell with them. In this way they become an oasis in a thirsty world, an oasis where it is good to taste the goodness of the Lord.
